Sono nata in Barbagia, la Sardegna nel suo essere un piccolo continente mi ha destinata al suo centro, selvaggio, impenetrabile e allo stesso tempo terra di arte e cultura. I miei maestri sono stati Liliana Cano per la pittura e Giovanni Antonio Sulas per gli arredamenti e le architetture. A loro e agli artisti del Novecento sardi continuo a dedicare spazi, ambienti e camere che

I was born in Barbagia. Sardinia, a small continent in its own right, destined me to its wild and impenetrable core, at the same time the cornerstone of art and culture. I have had two mentors: Liliana Cano taught me painting and Giovanni Antonio Sulas to furnish and have an eye for architecture. I keep on dedicating spaces, areas and rooms to them and other artists; these are meant as a natural continuation of what Mother Nature provided us with. This way, a terrace brings us closer to the sky and its nocturnal contemplation, at the same time making us feel at one with the magic of a sunset.

Sleeping here means feeling the intense emotions of resting between a sculpture by Ciusa and a work by the Melis brothers.

The Botteghe d'Arte were created in 2008, following the renovation of the stables. I often rode horses to go off and discover this land: I could not simply allow the energy of this place to vanish.

I invested time and effort in creating areas where craftsmanship is never trivial and obvious art: getting to know a region means enhancing its culture and tradition. A creative space where artistic minds and varied visions are combined.

The décor of the Botteghe dates back to the 1930s: here you'll find the apothecary's shelf, the pasta maker's closet or the carpenter's table.

Everything is given new lymph to become an exhibition space for blacksmiths, potters and cabinet makers. I have to admit, however, that women are the body and soul of my Botteghe: they are the hands of artisans, of Franca, Tonina and Maria, who help me craft my projects and bring my ideas to life.

Every item on display has either been conceived or chosen starting from materials such as wool, the Sardinian orbace, iron, cork and other ones: this is how the various collections were born. Cushions are embroidered following the Oliana traditions, put together to remind of folk costume or conceived with ancient fabrics that were used to store bread; porcelain and ceramic depicting artists of the Sardinian Novecento or the dishes printed with the Bosa filet. Tutto per celebrare la storia, la tradizione e la cultura della terra che ci ospita.

Everything runs towards celebrating history, tradition and the culture of the land that hosts us. I decided that the Botteghe door had to stay there to indicate the border with a different world: a world of art, culture and tradition.
